Cub Reminder: Students Cannot Share Food on Campus

One of the many ways that we keep our students safe at Garfield is to ensure that students are not sharing food. Due to the prevalence of food allergies among our students the no sharing food policy is a way to keep students with food allergies safe without drawing attention to them, or making them feel uncomfortable. This no sharing of food policy includes snacks from home for recess, lunch at school, lunch dropped off by a parent, or lunch served by Campus Catering.

There are three ways in which our students have access to lunch on campus. Students can bring a lunch from home, eat the lunch served by Campus Catering, or have food dropped off for them by a parent that has signed in at the office. It is important to remember that if you are dropping food off for your child, you must first sign into the office before taking the food to the Cub Café. Also, that food must be for your child alone. Due to the no sharing of food policy, we cannot have parents dropping off pizzas, sandwich platters, or other types of food to be shared by a group of students. Thank you for
